Dancing in the street

The 11th Annual 2nd Street Festival is this Sunday. MOLLY GIVEN

This weekend, stroll down to 2nd Street to partake in one of the most colorful events this summer season, the 2nd Street Festival. The festival takes over six blocks of 2nd Street between Germantown and Green streets in Northern Liberties, and all of the incredible, free family fun simply cannot be missed.

Now in its 11th year, the 2nd Street Festival has become a beloved tradition in the City of Brotherly Love and specifically the Northern Liberties neighborhood. "The Festival was started to bring business into the neighborhood," says 2nd Street Festival Director Meredith Williams. "Essentially, it's a party thrown to celebrate the culture, arts, and music of the neighborhood. It's a very artist-driven area. Fast-forward to today, the festival is now six blocks long and it goes from 2nd and Germantown all the way down to 2nd and Spring Garden. There's 150 different art vendors, 50 food vendors and just a ton of local businesses."

The festival was initially founded by William Reed (owner of Standard Tap), Oron Daskal (North Bowl) and Owen Kamihira (El Camino Real). As the years have gone by, the exciting extravaganza has grown immensely and every year simply tops the last.

This year's festivities will bring back some familiar favorites such as an on-site DJ keeping the party going; delicious food trucks serving up incredible bites (think Nomad Pizza, Poi Dog, Lil Pop Shop, Mom Mom's Polish Cart and more); plenty of artistic vendors selling one-of-a-kind trinkets (think houseware, prints, stained glass and wood); a live 3-D chalk demonstration (11 a.m.-3 p.m.) and of course incredible live entertainers on the Busker Stage.

"We always have a performance area for street performers and local musicians to come and set up," says Williams. "But new this year, during the day from 12 p.m. to 5 p.m., we will also have 'Skate the Foundry,' which is a skateboard pop-up demo for kids and adults. They have pads and skateboards and they'll show you how to ride. It's going to be really fun. Some professional skateboarders will be doing a demo as well."

Also new this year is the addition of Pod Park, owned by festival sponsors the Post Brothers. "Pod Park just opened a couple of months ago and we are including it as part of our festival footprint. So we're having programming there all day, entertainment and vendors as well," Williams added.

Local favorite Urban Village will also be offering a special brew exclusively being sold at the festival. "We're very lucky that Urban Village is located right on 2nd Street, and they are one of the 10 beer gardens that we are going to have. They actually brew a beer for the festival, a nice and light easy-drinking lager. It will be available in their tent and a bunch of other tents along the street as well," says Williams. "For the first time ever, we have all local beer as the sponsors, so we're lucky that we have such talented breweries within an hour of the city. We have, obviously, Urban Village, Evil Genius from Fishtown, Neshaminy Creek from Croydon and Sly Fox from Pottstown."

Not a fan of beer? No problem. Festival spirit sponsor Jim Beam is also unveiling a new spirit, Jim Beam Peach. The tasty new libation will be sold at the festival along with other refreshing cocktails.

"All of the beer gardens are going to have cocktails with Jim Beam Peach and other wonderful brands as well," says Williams. "There will be rum drinks, gin drinks and tequila — just some really great summertime cocktails."

The 2nd Street Festival will take place this Sunday, Aug. 4, from noon to 10 p.m. Taking public transportation is encouraged, with available stops on the Market Frankford Line. In addition, festival sponsor Indigo Bike Share will have a booth on Green Street. If you pick a bike up from around the city, you can drop it off there or at their Spring Garden location.

Where to celebrate National Watermelon Day in Philly this weekend

Feel revived by sweet cocktails and savory dishes this Saturday.

MADELINE PRESLAND

There's nothing like eating slice after slice of fresh watermelon on a hot day, or adding the fruit to salads and drinks to capture the taste of summer. This Saturday, bars and restaurants all over the city are in the spirit to celebrate the vibrant fruit with drink specials, fun dishes and more. Here's where to celebrate National Watermelon Day this weekend.

Watermelon Radish Cocktail

Though the radish doesn't taste like the melon it's named after, the bright pink color and mild flavor makes this vegetable a wonderful addition to summery dishes and drinks. Tasting room and bottle shop Art in the Age is serving a Garden Gimlet ($10) this Saturday that incorporates the radish for a more savory twist on a watermelon cocktail. The drink has gin, basil vermouth, elderflower-tonic syrup and lime juice.
Noon-8 p.m., 116 N. 3rd St., artintheage.com

Sweet Cocktail Options

Try not just one, but two watermelon cocktails at the Hotel Palomar's Square 1682 bar and restaurant. Try a sweet take on a traditional summer shandy with their Watermelon Shandy ($6), made with wheat beer and fresh watermelon juice. Or try the gin-based Madison's Square Garden ($13) with watermelon juice, honey and basil.
8 a.m.-11 p.m, 121 S. 17th St., square1682.com

Albacore Tuna Crudo

Sweet meets savory at Royal Boucherie in Old City. Known for exceptional seafood and delicious cocktails, the brasserie has a more refreshing appetizer special for National Watermelon Day. Chef Nicholas Elmi's tuna crudo special has a watermelon jus, Japanese ginger and cucumber ($14).
10 a.m.-2 a.m, 52 S. 2nd St., royalboucherie.com

Watermelon Gazpacho

Head to Café Ynez for a combination of summertime flavors that will help you cool down. The Mexican restaurant is offering a tomato-and-watermelon gazpacho topped with jumbo lump crab and fresh greens for $10. The restaurant is BYOB, so bring your own tequila to make cocktails with their mango-and-mint-mixer carafe or blood-orange margarita base ($13 each).
9 a.m.-10 p.m., 2025 Washington Ave., cafeynez.com

Summertime Mule

A classic cocktail gets a sweet twist at CO-OP in University City. Available only on Saturday, Aug. 3, try a watermelon mule with local vodka, ginger beer and frozen watermelon juice cubes. The chill lounge is a short walk across the bridge from Center City. Spend a day in University City visiting outdoor spots like rooftop park Cira Green (80 S. 30th St.) or The Porch outside of 30th Street Station.
10 a.m.-2 a.m., 20 S. 33rd St., coopphilly.com

Garden Toast

Eat your veggies while celebrating National Watermelon Day at Red Owl Tavern. The restaurant will have a Garden Toast special with watermelon radish, snap peas and cherry tomatoes, topped with Green Goddess dressing. Head to Red Owl for snacks or dinner, and then check out the Hotel Monaco's rooftop bar for spectacular city views.
8 a.m.-3 p.m. & 5 p.m.-10 p.m., 433 Chestnut St., redowltavern.com

The 'next step' of motherhood

Patricia Arquette gives Metro the scoop on her enlightening new comedy, "Otherhood."

MOLLY GIVEN

Netflix's latest star-studded comedy "Otherhood," starring Patricia Arquette, Felicity Huffman and Angela Bassett, focuses on the complicated relationships mothers can have with their adult sons — or lack thereof. But that's not all the heartwarming flick explores. It also showcases the "next step" of motherhood — essentially, what happens after your kids no longer need you to pack their lunch, give them rides to school or fix their problems. What the women in the film discover is that although their kids no longer need their help, they may need some help on their own.

Arquette sat down with Metro to discuss the film, dive into why this story is so relatable to everyone, and discuss why sometimes we take whom we love the most for granted.

"Otherhood" follows the deep friendship between hard-working mothers Gillian (Arquette), Carol (Bassett) and Helen (Huffman). After blatant snubs on Mother's Day from their sons, the women decide to embark on a road trip and a maternal ambush to check in on how their sons are doing — and maybe find out a little dirt on their lives as well.

Being a mother herself, Arquette understood the innate desire Gillian had to simply just see her son. "I think she's worried about her son. It's not just about her son ignoring her on Mother's Day or that she's upset that he didn't call her," says Arquette. "It's her maternal instinct driving her. She just wants to know, are you okay? Are you alive? Are you eating? Are you with that girl I don't like?"

Although the film is lighthearted, hilarious and a lot of fun (cue the drunken antics three middle-aged women can get into in the Big Apple), it also has underlying messages that ring true for anyone. "Angela and I were talking about how relatable this movie is to different people at different times. I think all of these characters are relatable to a point. We all have been somebody's child or we are someone's mother or our wife is someone's mother," says Arquette.

At the surface, the women blame their strained relationships on a lot: their sons' significant others, jobs, bad habits, or even themselves and their own mothering styles. The soul-searching leads the three mothers to overcompensate with their sons, whether it's setting them up on hasty blind dates or even breaking into their "prison-like" apartment through a window.

What Arquette thinks Gillian needed to realize, though, is that focusing too much on the lives of others simply isn't fulfilling to your own — which can be a hard pill to swallow. "I think she learned that her meddling can actually create a lot of problems, and that she doesn't always know best and that she should trust her son and his instincts," says Arquette. "I think she learned that her marriage also isn't as perfect as she thought and those are both difficult things for her to come to terms with. Also, that she needs to be up higher on her own priority list."

"Otherhood" as a comedy is a hilarious feat highlighted by the incredible cast of talent, directing chops from Cindy Chupack and a highly amusing story line. But even though the film at the surface may seem tied up in a neat bow, it certainly tests a lot: the fragile relationship adult children and their parents can have, the tumultuous costs decisions can have on a marriage, and even the boundaries of friendship.

"It's really about realizing we can't take our parents for granted, even if we are doing it subconsciously. But also you learn what are healthy boundaries for people to have. We're not the same selves we were when we were kids, so let's redefine who we are as grown-ups in our own right. What is the joy in our lives? I think it's also a reminder not to take our marriages for granted. So it's not just about one aspect, there's a lot of different things."

Naomi Watts and Octavia Spencer on their powerful new film, 'Luce'

The film hits theaters this weekend. PAT KING

People have a lot of reasons to be walking on eggshells these days. For some, it could be navigating conversations. Or in the case of safety in the wake of so many public shootings, people are right to be constantly suspicious and to hold any evidence of danger as an alarm that should be blared at its loudest volume. The new film "Luce," premiering this Friday, sets out to confront audiences with the issues of privacy, search and seizure, and privilege, all set in a place that may hit close to home for many American families: our school system.

The film, adapted from the play by J.C. Lee and directed by Julius Onah, follows the title character, Luce, played by Kelvin Harrison Jr., who was taken in by an upper-middle-class white family after growing up as a child soldier in war-torn Eritrea. Luce has grown up to be both an "A" student and an all-star athlete, but runs into trouble after he hands in an essay to his teacher Harriet Wilson, played by Octavia Spencer, that contains some troubling and potentially dangerous ideas. After Wilson alerts Luce's parents Amy and Peter, played by Naomi Watts and Tim Roth, they must decide whether or not to defend him or act on their suspicions.

For actors Octavia Spencer and Naomi Watts, the opportunity to delve into such a vibrant piece of storytelling that would allow the audience to carry on the conversation once the credits start to roll wasn't one to pass up. According to Watts, she initially signed on once she had discovered that Spencer was involved, but was blown away by the complexity of Lee's story.

"Octavia was already attached and that was a big draw card for me," recalls Watts, as I meet with both actors. "We had worked together before and I'm a big fan of her work as well. That made me read it right away and the minute I read it, I knew there was so much there. It made me think all day. I was walking around wanting to discuss it."

Spencer agrees, and agrees that the space that the film occupied in her mind after reading it was the main draw for her to sign on to the project.

"I had actually met with J.C. about another project and he asked me to read 'Luce.' Then, like Naomi said, once you read it, you can't get the characters and the story out of your mind," says Spencer. "I kept wanting to relitigate it in my mind and take it from different perspectives. Then I thought, okay, I'm thinking about this way too much. I obviously want to do it. Even though I get nervous about Harriet in a lot of ways, I really enjoyed everything about it."

The film plays the audience's ideals themselves, letting them hear from all sides of the argument regarding the place of privilege where Luce is coming from and the hopes and dreams that good-hearted people in his orbit wish to push upon him and protect. To Watts, that kind of active participation is what makes the film such a poignant and important work.

"I think it's very satisfying as an audience member to sit there and watch something and then realize. 'Oh, I'm involved in this story, too!'" explains Watts. "It doesn't just take place in the cinema. It's going to live in your mind and there's more for you to examine. Giving that much power to the audience and [having] that much faith in them, I think is incredibly satisfying. Yes, all of these characters are well-intentioned. They're not evil people, but they get caught up in their myopic viewpoints and [in] trying to control things. [They] create identities for the vulnerable — that being Luce. That's when things go a little wobbly because he starts pushing back and says, 'I want to be in charge of my own identity.'"

The film practically hums with intensity throughout its duration, and will be one of the most talked-about films of the year as well as surefire awards contender. The arguments presented in Lee's hauntingly timely narrative never lend themselves to solutions that are easy. All of the characters mean well, but their good intentions deserve asterisks next to them.

"All of those asterisks that you mentioned are really the ambiguities of life," explains Spencer. "The only people we know how the story ends [for them] are the people who are no longer with us. Every day that you live, your story changes. The truth and perception changes. That's what this movie is forcing the audience to do. You become active participants in this film. It's not a passive viewing. ... I love that there are loose ends, because nothing in life is tied up with a bow."

THE WHISKER POLICE

In this day and age, you'd think people would be accustomed to all kinds of variations in head and facial hair. Unfortunately, there are still idiots who will heckle you if your style is not to their liking. The fact that the styles that are heckled change over time makes it obvious that the problem lies with the hecklers, not the hecklees. (When I was in college many years ago, I was once actually heckled just for having a mustache!)

My own present style (mutton chops with connecting mustache and "soul patch") is admittedly quite unusual. Why does that make it wrong? I have actually received quite a few compliments on it. I have, however, had a couple of hecklers. One idiot told me he thought I had been watching too many movies. (How many is too many anyhow?)

To these jerks, I say:

Please pardon me the TERRIBLE injury I've done you! You're angry with me? Why? It's no skin off your back. Grow up already! Yeah, I know. It's human nature. So are lots of even nastier things. That doesn't excuse them.

4 THINGS TO KNOW

Hal Prince, producer of some of Broadway's biggest hits, dead at 91

Director Harold Prince applauds during the curtain call of "The Phantom of the Opera" in New York City. REUTERS

Prince's greatest hits include "West Side Story" and "Evita."

Harold "Hal" Prince, who won a record 21 Tony Awards as producer and director of some of Broadway's biggest hits of the second half of the 20th century including "The Phantom of the Opera," "West Side Story," "Fiddler on the Roof," "Cabaret" and "Evita," died on Wednesday at age 91.

Prince died after a brief illness in Reykjavik, Iceland, his publicist said.

Prince was famed for his dynamic collaborations with two composers, American Stephen Sondheim and Briton Andrew Lloyd Webber, and had been a protege of legendary Broadway showman George Abbott.

Prince became a wunderkind producer in the 1950s with hits including "West Side Story," the groundbreaking re-imagining of Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet."

He turned to directing in the 1960s with hits including "Cabaret," set in decadent Berlin amid the rise of the Nazis, for which he won the first of eight Tonys as best director.

He joined with Sondheim to create a series of sophisticated musicals in the 1970s, then teamed with Lloyd Webber for the blockbusters "Evita" and "The Phantom of the Opera," which became the longest-running show in Broadway history.

"He's the best director of musicals around by far," Sondheim, whose work with Prince included the 1970s musicals "Company," "Follies," "A Little Night Music," "Pacific Overtures" and "Sweeney Todd," said in a 1984 interview with Prince biographer Carol Ilson.

> "He has a more acute ear than most producers. He takes it seriously and is more daring, imaginative and endlessly creative. He likes to take chances."
> Stephen Sondheim, composer

"He has a more acute ear than most producers. He takes it seriously and is more daring, imaginative and endlessly creative. He likes to take chances," Sondheim said.

In 1979, Prince directed two huge hits that opened within months of each other on Broadway.

In March, "Sweeney Todd" — the macabre tale of a murderous barber set to Sondheim's music — made its debut. In September, Prince brought "Evita" to New York from London, where it had opened the previous year, telling the story of Eva Peron, the magnetic wife of Argentine strongman Juan Peron, with Lloyd Webber's music.

Prince rebounded from a handful of 1980s misfires with his biggest hit. "The Phantom of the Opera" — the story of a disfigured musical genius obsessed with a young operatic soprano — opened in London in 1986, then took Broadway by storm in 1988.

"There is not a single scene in the show that does not have a surprise in it," Prince told Playbill in 2011 of "Phantom."

"Sometimes it's fire that you don't know is going to be there, sometimes it's a voice, sometimes it's a piano playing by itself. But there's always something. And sometimes it's a piece of scenery almost falling on a diva," Prince said. REUTERS

Cam shows man dragging woman in robbery attempt

2 Police are on the lookout for a man they say dragged a woman across the sidewalk during an attempted armed robbery in North Philly. Investigators released surveillance video that shows the shocking daylight attack, which occurred at around 10:15 a.m. on July 21 near the 1500 block of Susquehanna Avenue. The video shows a man approaching the 33-year-old victim from behind and trying to snag a backpack from her body. The woman resists the attack, and that's when the suspect is seen pulling her to the pavement and dragging her across the ground. Now police are seeking the public's help. The suspect is described as a black man between the ages of 20 and 30, about 5 feet 10 inches and medium build with a low haircut and a long beard. He wore a white T-shirt and black jeans. Cop accused of blindfolding US suspect in custody

3 Italian magistrates are investigating accusations of abuse of office against a policeman who allegedly blindfolded an American teenager soon after his arrest on suspicion of killing a police officer, a source close to the matter said on Wednesday. Gabriel Christian Natale-Hjorth, 18, was arrested on Saturday with his friend Finnegan Lee Elder, 19, on suspicion of murdering policeman Mario Cerciello Rega, after a dispute following a failed drug deal. A picture of Natale-Hjorth, whose family have said he is innocent of any wrongdoing, in custody with a blindfold and with his hands cuffed behind his back, started circulating on social media on Saturday. In a news conference on Tuesday, prosecutors said they would investigate the treatment of Natale-Hjorth, without giving details that it would concern abuse of office, and said the police force itself had reported the existence of the picture. Canadian cops to scale back search for murder suspects

4 Canadian police said on Wednesday they are scaling back an intensive weeklong search in the northern Manitoba wilderness for two teenagers charged with killing a university lecturer and suspected in the murders of two tourists. The intensive search in the area for Kam McLeod, 19, and Bryer Schmegelsky, 18, both of Port Alberni, British Columbia, was sparked by two sightings around the tiny Manitoba town of Gillam last week. Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP) are cutting back the number of officers to 40 from a previously undisclosed number, and the Canadian military and air force, which had been supporting the police, are pulling out, the RCMP said. "I know that today's news is not what the victims' families and the people of Manitoba wanted to hear," Assistant Commissioner Jane MacClatchy told a news briefing. REUTERS

Woodstock 50 music festival called off due to 'unforeseen setbacks'

Organizers failed on a last-ditch free-show attempt.

The troubled Woodstock 50 anniversary music festival planned for August was officially canceled on Wednesday, with organizers blaming a series of "unforeseen setbacks."

The three-day festival, meant to mark the 50th anniversary of the famed 1969 celebration of peace and music, was planned for Aug. 16-18.

"Woodstock 50 today announced that the three-day festival to celebrate its 50th anniversary has been canceled," the organizers said in a statement.

"We are saddened that a series of unforeseen setbacks has made it impossible to put on the festival we imagined with the great lineup we had booked and the social engagement we were anticipating," said Michael Lang, one of the original producers of the 1969 event.

The cancellation was widely expected after a troubled five months in which organizers were turned down at two proposed sites in upstate New York, lost funding, and headliners including rapper Jay-Z and pop star Miley Cyrus pulled out.

Tickets never went on sale for the festival.

Organizers last week made a last-ditch attempt to put on a free, scaled-down event at an amphitheater in Maryland, but several of the 80 or so acts began pulling out despite having already been paid.

Lang said in his statement that the smaller event in Maryland would have been aimed at raising funds for nonprofits fighting climate change and organizations encouraging Americans to vote in the 2020 U.S. general elections.

"We are saddened that a series of unforeseen setbacks has made it impossible to put on the festival we imagined with the great lineup we had booked and the social engagement we were anticipating."
Michael Lang, one of the original producers of the 1969 event

Woodstock 50 was first planned for the Watkins Glen motor racing venue in upstate New York, but the site pulled out in June. Organizers then attempted in vain to seek permits in Vernon, New York.

The nonprofit Bethel Woods Center for the Arts, the current owner of the field where the 1969 Woodstock festival took place, also scaled back plans earlier this year for a three-day anniversary event. It will instead host separate concerts by Ringo Starr, Santana and the Doobie Brothers.

"My thoughts turn to Bethel and its celebration of our 50th anniversary to reinforce the values of compassion, human dignity and the beauty of our differences embraced by Woodstock," Lang said in his statement on Wednesday. REUTERS

Questions arise as to what was on Buttigieg's face

At the beginning of Tuesday's Democratic presidential debate, Twitter started buzzing as soon as Pete Buttigieg began to speak. Unfortunately, it wasn't because of anything he was saying.

Rather, the question was cosmetic: What's that thing on Mayor Pete's face?

It was a small smudge on his forehead — a speck of something, a skosh of schmutz, maybe a stress-related zit. Some jokesters suggested it was a bit of salsa. (Buttigieg had a mini-viral moment earlier in the week, when he asserted it was OK to mix the Mexican dip with ranch dressing.)

> "All right, so our best guess is that it — there were these little, kind of gnats around. Maybe I smooshed one and it got on my forehead. I don't know."
> Pete Buttigieg

The social-media buzz was so distinct that MSNBC's Brian Williams began the network's post-debate coverage by saying they would get to the bottom of what that thing was.

Finally, around midnight, Buttigieg's spokeswoman Lis Smith ended the mystery: "It was a gnat!" she tweeted. "Apparently a very gnatty debate — but unfazed as always Pete Buttigieg pushed forward."

On CNN's "New Day" Wednesday morning, host Alisyn Camerota asked Buttigieg about the smudge.

"All right, so our best guess is that it — there were these little, kind of gnats around," said Buttigieg. "Maybe I smooshed one and it got on my forehead. I don't know. I didn't know about it until after. That's the thing about having something on your forehead. But hopefully it didn't distract from the message about what's at stake in this election."

"It shows lightning-quick reflexes," said co-host John Berman.

"Well, you want to show that you can do many things at once in this election," said Buttigieg.

As for the substance that wasn't on his face, Buttigieg attracted good reviews for his performance Tuesday night, with most polls showing him near the top of the 10-person field.

The erstwhile gnat now joins the "Live TV Political Schmutz" hall of fame, alongside Joe Kennedy's overuse of Chapstick before his State of the Union response and that white thing on Ted Cruz's lips during a 2016 Republican debate.

As for Buttigieg's comments on a salsa-ranch dressing combo, that controversy showed signs of raging into a third day.

Boston fugitive facing charges after bugging teens' rooms

A Boston man has been arrested for allegedly installing hidden cameras in a Maine home to apparently spy on two Pennsylvania teens.

NBC reported that Samuel P. Mickey, 26, will be charged with violation of privacy and being a fugitive from justice. His cash bail is set at $2,500; he will be in court at a later date. Mickey was arrested on July 25 by the Boston Police Department, seacoastonline.com reported.

Police told outlets that on July 18, a Pennsylvania family was on vacation at a home in Eliot, Maine, when the teens noticed "phone-style chargers" around the home they were staying in. One of the teens discovered there was a memory card within the devices, which turned out to be hidden cameras.

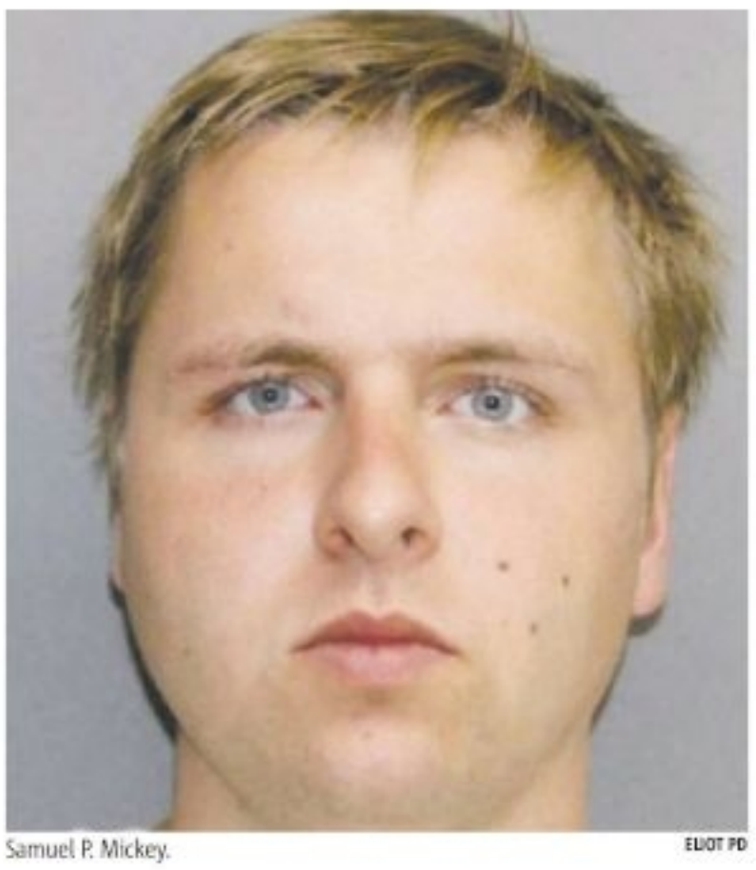
It was reported that the home was owned by Mickey's parents. Mickey was also visiting the home at the time the family was staying there.

The cameras were allegedly located in the bathrooms and bedrooms of the house. The teens removed all cards and provided them to the police.

NBC reported that the Eliot Police Department procured a search warrant to review what was on the memory cards, which revealed unknown people in the bathroom and bedroom.

It was reported that the cameras were angled specifically so viewers of the tapes could watch people on the toilet, in the shower and even in the bedrooms.

Eliot Police Chief Elliott Moya said in a statement: "Most would be appalled at these actions as they are a tremendous breach of privacy. Thankfully, the individual that found the cameras was abundantly suspicious and examined further to learn it was more than just a phone charger."



Samuel P. Mickey. ELIOT PD

Boston police also got a search warrant for Mickey's residence and car.

This investigation was ongoing as of July 31. If you or anyone you know has any information, please call Sgt. Ronald Lund at 207-439-1179.

U.S. Navy SEAL Special Operations Chief Edward Gallagher, with wife Andrea Gallagher, celebrate after he was acquitted of most of the serious charges against him during his court-martial trial at Naval Base San Diego in San Diego, July 2, 2019. REUTERS

Trump slams prosecutors in court-martial of Navy SEAL

The president asked that military awards be rescinded from Navy prosecutors.

President Donald Trump said on Wednesday he has directed top U.S. Navy officials to rescind a military award he says was given to Navy prosecutors who tried a Navy SEAL platoon leader acquitted of murder and attempted murder charges.

The series of tweets from Trump marked at least the third time the president has publicly commented directly on the case brought against Special Operations Chief Edward Gallagher, who was accused of committing various war crimes while deployed in Iraq in 2017.

The court-martial of Gallagher in San Diego ended earlier this month with a military jury acquitting him of murdering a captured Islamic State fighter but convicting him of unlawfully posing for photos with the prisoner's dead body.

Gallagher also was found not guilty of attempted murder charges stemming from the wounding of two unarmed civilians — a schoolgirl and an elderly man — who were shot from a sniper's perch. Much of the testimony against him came from fellow sailors who were given immunity from prosecution.

On Tuesday, Trump tweeted that the prosecutors "who lost the case ... were ridiculously given a Navy Achievement Medal," and the president added that he was ordering Navy Secretary Richard Spencer and the chief of naval operations to "immediately withdraw and rescind the awards."

It was not immediately clear what awards Trump was referring to on Twitter. The Navy did not respond to requests for comment.

Trump also criticized Navy prosecutors "for giving immunity in a totally incompetent fashion" and took credit for having released Gallagher "from solitary confinement so he could fight his case properly."

DISGRUNTLED SUBORDINATES

Gallagher, a 40-year-old decorated combat veteran, was spared any prison time beyond the nearly seven months he had spent in pretrial custody. But the jury sentenced him to a demotion in rank and pay for the crime of posing for pictures with a human casualty. His lawyers said they planned to appeal those penalties.

Gallagher has maintained he was wrongly accused by disgruntled subordinates who fabricated allegations against him over grievances with his leadership style and tactics and testified for the prosecution under grants of immunity.

Trump first intervened in Gallagher's case in March, when he ordered the Navy SEAL moved from a military brig to less restrictive confinement at a Navy base, in recognition of what the president called the platoon leader's "past service to our country." The court-martial judge later released Gallagher altogether, citing pretrial prosecutor misconduct.

Trump weighed in again just after the jury verdict to congratulate Gallagher on Twitter.

In May, Trump said publicly that he was considering pardons for a number of U.S. military personnel accused of war crimes, and Gallagher's case was widely believed to be one of those under review.

Whitney breakdown

The Whitney Stakes attracted eight runners, five of which are career millionaires. An automatic bid to this year's Breeders' Cup Classic is on the line. Here is a look at four horses that MetroBet predicts will come up big on Saturday afternoon.

GETTY IMAGES

No. 4 THUNDER SNOW is the only two-time winner of the Dubai World Cup, the richest race in the world, but has never won in North America (4-0-1-2). That could change on Saturday at Saratoga. THUNDER SNOW was last seen rallying for third in the Metropolitan Handicap on the Belmont Stakes day undercard. Most handicappers surmised that the one-mile distance would be too short for him, and they were proven right. Trainer Saeed bin Suroor wisely stretches the son of Helmet back out to 1 1/8-miles in the Whitney Stakes.

No. 6 MCKINZIE has hit the exacta in 10 of his 11 career starts but has burned a lot of win money in four starts this year, posting a 4-1-3-0 record. He was a runaway victor in Churchill's Alysheba Stakes on Kentucky Derby weekend but lost a battle with Gift Box in the Santa Anita Handicap and Battle of Midway in the San Pasqual Stakes earlier in 2019.

No. 8 PRESERVATIONIST is a relatively new face to the handicap division despite being six years old. Trainer Jimmy Jerkens appears to have the son Arch in peak form based on his convincing score in Belmont's Suburban Stakes on July 6 over multiple Grade I winner Catholic Boy, which was his third win in as many starts in 2019. PRESERVATIONIST may try to take them all the way in the Whitney under Junior Alvarado.

No. 5 VINO ROSSO will be rolling late under John Velazquez in the Whitney. The Todd Pletcher trainee was last seen acing the Gold Cup at Santa Anita over Pacific Classic-bound Gift Box. Living up to his name, VINO ROSSO has gotten better with age. He already has a win over this course, as he took last year's Jim Dandy Stakes at age three. Pletcher and Velazquez have teamed up for three prior Whitney scores with Left Bank (2002), Lawyer Ron (2007) and Cross Traffic (2013).

The play: $8 exacta Thunder Snow/McKinzie, Preservationist, $4 exacta Thunder Snow/Vino Rosso ($20)

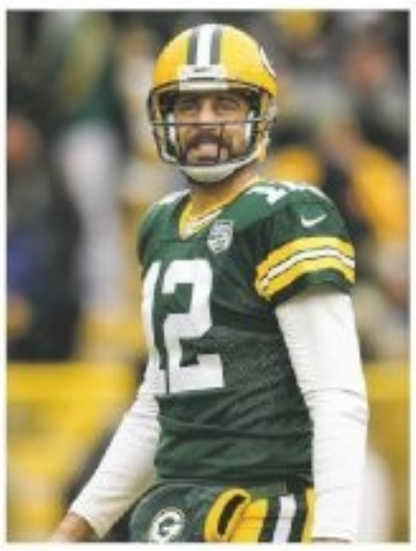
NFL betting: Take Packers Over

One thing is for sure. The cheese in Green Bay is no longer stale.

The Packers will feature a boatload of "new" in 2019 with a new head coach in 39-year-old Matt LaFleur, top defensive free agents in Za'Darius Smith, Preston Smith and Adrian Amos, as well as arguably the best linebacker in the 2019 NFL Draft in Rashan Gary from Michigan.

The Packers defense gave up 25.0 points per game last season, which ranked 22nd in the league. It gave them little to no shot in low-scoring games, which is a huge problem in the defensive-focused NFC North. Look for Green Bay's defense to make a sizable leap in the right direction in 2019.

As for the offense, the Packers didn't add much around Aaron Rodgers – but the hope is that LaFleur's new system will resurrect the Discount Double Check champion.



Rodgers actually threw for the second most yards of his career last season, which hints that despite all of 2018's chaos that he is still capable of being the top QB in the NFL.

The play: Packers Over 9 wins -110 at MetroBet.us/Sugar

Phillies fail to improve pitching staff at MLB trade deadline

An area of concern goes untouched while the rest of the NL East improved.

JOE PANTORNO

Phillies GM Matt Klentak failed to address his team's pitching needs. GETTY IMAGES

Phillies General Manager Matt Klentak did nothing to improve his pitching staff outside acquiring veteran southpaw Jason Vargas from the New York Mets on Monday.

While Vargas provides another arm to add to a struggling rotation, it isn't enough to ease any tension surrounding the position of need as the Phillies prepare for the final stretch of the regular season.

The Phillies had been linked to a few prominent names in July, including Madison Bumgarner and Tanner Roark.

Roark was traded from the Cincinnati Reds to the Oakland Athletics while Bumgarner stayed with the San Francisco Giants.

It leaves the Phillies stuck with a questionable starting rotation behind Aaron Nola.

Jake Arrieta is playing injured, Zach Eflin is cracking under the workload that comes with a full MLB season, and Vince Velasquez continues to struggle with inconsistencies.

They might have stumbled upon something promising in Drew Smyly, however.

The 30-year-old veteran has put together two strong starts to begin his Phillies career. He's allowed just a single run in 13 innings of work, including seven innings of shutout ball on Tuesday night against the San Francisco Giants.

The hope is that Vargas can continue performing up to his latest three-month clip in which he's sported a 3.32 ERA.

It remains to be seen if that would be enough to hold things down for the remainder of the season. But it's a fair assessment to admit that the Phillies' rotation and bullpen are still very much on shaky ground.

The Phillies' starting-pitching ERA continues to slump down the MLB standings as it's ranked 18th with a mark of 4.62.

Philadelphia's bullpen received some tough news on Wednesday when it was announced that David Robertson would be out for the season. He needs surgery to repair his flexor tendon.

While Klentak was stagnant, the rest of the NL East was plenty active when it came to upgrading their respective pitching staffs.

Before offloading Vargas, the Mets made headlines by acquiring All-Star starter Marcus Stroman from the Toronto Blue Jays to put together an imposing rotation for the next two years.

The 28-year-old will join Jacob deGrom, Steven Matz, Noah Syndergaard and Zack Wheeler. Mets management opted to hold on to the latter two through the trade deadline despite receiving heavy interest from contending teams.

New York doesn't provide the largest threat in the division, but a hot start to the second half has offered the promise of contention for at least the Wild Card spot.

Sitting just five games behind the Phillies in the Wild Card standings, that's not an insurmountable deficit to overcome — especially with two months left in the regular season.

Meanwhile, the Washington Nationals bolstered their bullpen on Wednesday by adding Daniel Hudson from the Blue Jays along with Roenis Elias and Hunter Strickland from the Seattle Mariners.

The division-leading Atlanta Braves took the cake, however, picking up Chris Martin from the Rangers on Tuesday before nabbing Detroit Tigers closer Shane Greene and Giants closer Mark Melancon on Wednesday in the final hour of the deadline.

It's a dangerous game for the Phillies to play as the rest of the division outside the Miami Marlins got significantly better. That doesn't bode well for their chances of staying in the postseason hunt for the remainder of the year.

The Phillies entered play on Wednesday night 6.5 games behind the Braves for first in the division while sitting in a tie with the Chicago Cubs for the top NL Wild Card spot.

Phils nab Dickerson, pick up OF depth

Acquiring the veteran outfielder was the only notable move made by the Phillies on deadline day.

JOE PANTORNO

The Phillies picked up Corey Dickerson from the Pirates for a player to be named later, and cash. GETTY IMAGES

The Philadelphia Phillies pulled off one notable move just an hour before Major League Baseball's 4 p.m. ET trade deadline, acquiring Corey Dickerson from the Pittsburgh Pirates for a player to be named later and international bonus pool money.

The move provides the Phillies with some much-needed outfield depth, offering an opportunity to shake up the lineup during the final two months of the season.

At 30 years old, Dickerson had been sidelined for a large portion of the season due to a shoulder injury and, most recently, a groin issue. But when he's been healthy, he's been red-hot.

In 43 games this year, Dickerson was slashing .317/.376/.556 with four home runs and 25 RBI. Two of those round-trippers came on Tuesday against the Cincinnati Reds during a game that was highlighted by a benches-clearing brawl sparked by Amir Garrett.

It was the exclamation point of a torrid 10-game stretch for the left fielder in which he slashed .423/.545/.654. That's a rare good stretch for Dickerson, who has been a shell of his former self during a two-year stint with the Pirates.

After heading to Pittsburgh in 2018, Dickerson hit just 13 home runs in 135 games, though his batting average was a solid, even .300. The lack of power was a disappointing turn of events, however, considering the lefty averaged 26 home runs during his two seasons with the Tampa Bay Rays from 2016 to 2017.

The Phillies will be hoping the change of scenery to a hitter-friendly Citizens Bank Park will help Dickerson regain that power-hitting form while adding another outfield option to the lineup.

Philadelphia's outfield depth had fallen under siege since Andrew McCutchen went down with a season-ending ACL injury in June. Since then, the Phillies plummeted from tops in the NL East to a battle just to stay out of third place.

Dickerson would immediately slot into the starting left field role while Jay Bruce is on the 10-day IL, relegating Adam Hasely back to the bench. When Bruce returns, Dickerson could move to center field, allowing Scott Kingery to take over full-time as the starting third baseman over the struggling Maikel Franco.
